83rd Annual International Competition: Printmaking

May 30 - August 1, 2009

Juried by Shelly Bancroft and Peter Nesbett
Publishers of Art on Paper and Founders of Triple Candie
On behalf of The Print Center, I am very pleased to present our 83rd Annual International Competition: Printmaking; renowned both for being the oldest such competition in the United States and for the exceptionally high quality works in the resulting exhibitions. Alternating each year between printmaking and photography, the competition draws artists from all over the world, and even at the distinguished age of 83 continues to attract an ever growing number of entries.

We are very pleased to have the participation of guest jurors Shelly Bancroft and Peter Nesbett, who carefully selected 33 pieces by 29 artists from more than 1,900 works submitted by 482 artists. Following our intention to keep the competition vibrant and relevant, we invited Shelly and Peter’s participation due to their deep knowledge of contemporary printmaking gleaned from their activities as co-publishers of Art on Paper magazine, combined with their idiosyncratic and even controversial curatorial stance evidenced by the work done at their nonprofit contemporary art venue Triple Candie in Harlem, New York.

Shelly holds a BA in Painting from Michigan State University and an MA in Art History from the University of Washington, Seattle. She served as Curator of Exhibitions, Boston Center for the Arts, and was the Director of the Boston Sculptors at Chapel Gallery. Shelly was also the founder and producer of a Seattle-based radio program devoted to the visual arts entitled Art in Your Ear, which featured interviews with artists and arts professionals such as Jeff Wall, Josiah McElheny, and Gary Garrels.

Peter, who also serves Art on Paper as its editor, holds a BA in Visual Studies from Cornell University, an MA in Art History from the University of Washington, Seattle and a post-master’s certificate in Executive Management from the Institute for Not-for-Profit Management at Columbia University. He was the recipient of a research fellowship from Boston University and a major research grant from the National Endowment of the Humanities. Peter founded and directed the Jacob Lawrence Catalogue Raisonné Project, through which more than 1,000 of the artist’s works were located, documented and published and exhibited. The resulting publication earned the prestigious George Wittenborn Art Book Award from the Art Libraries Society of North America. Peter has also served as the Interim Curator of Modern & Contemporary Art, Seattle Art Museum, and held positions at Christie, Manson & Woods, International, NY, and Gagosian Gallery, NY.

Together they co-founded and co-direct Triple Candie. Initially producing traditional style exhibitions and programs with contemporary artists such as Laylah Ali, Trenton Doyle Hancock, Jim Hodges, Bruce Nauman, Howardena Pindell, Bill Viola, and Andrea Zittel, since 2006 exhibitions have been about art, but have not included art and are realized without the involvement of artists. Shows have included unauthorized retrospectives on the work of reclusive artists, such as David Hammons and Cady Noland; a retrospective of a fictional post-Minimalist; the recreation of a pioneering 1950s-era photography gallery; a quasi-anthropological exhibition of common objects; and an unauthorized archive and reading room dedicated to New York-based curator-writer-critic Matthew Higgs.
As you will read in their Juror’s Statement, Shelly and Peter wrestled with the concept for this exhibition as they prepared their selections. After considering several alternative presentation modes, they elected to stay within traditional boundaries. We nonetheless found their ideas for subverting typical practice a stimulating injection of contemporary curatorial concept into the long history of the Competition.

We are proud to be able to present over $2,250 in purchase, cash, material and exhibition awards to eight artists. The two prestigious purchase prizes include the Philadelphia Museum of Art Purchase Award selected by John Ittmann, Curator of Prints, Philadelphia Museum of Art. Through that award, The Print Center Collection at the Philadelphia Museum of Art will be enhanced by Thomas Wood's The Pollinators, 2007. It is my honor to award The Graphic Chemical and Ink Company Purchase Award ($300) for a hand-pulled print to Aspasia Tsoutsoura.

We are pleased to announce cash and material award recipients selected by me together with The Print Center’s Curator of Prints and Photographs John Caperton: The Jacqueline L. Zemel Prize ($500) was awarded to Stella Ebner; The Print Center’s Honorary Council Award Honorable Mention ($100) was granted to Aline Feldman; The Art on Paper Award (one year subscription) was awarded to John Williams; the Renaissance Graphic Arts, Inc. Award ($50) to Peter Haarz and the Silicon Gallery Fine Art Print Award ($250) to Will Work For Good and the opportunity for a solo exhibition to Andrew Kozlowski.

At the age of ninety-four, The Print Center continues to expand its vision in support of printmaking and photography as vital contemporary arts and to encourage the appreciation of the printed image in all its forms. The Print Center is an internationally recognized organization providing opportunities for artists to exhibit, exchange ideas and sell work, through group and solo exhibitions, the Annual International Competition, The Print Center Series of continuing education programs and The Print Center Gallery Store. I extend our deepest gratitude to all of the outstanding artists whom submitted work for this year’s competition, and to jurors Shelly Bancroft and Peter Nesbett for making the 83rd Annual International Competition: Printmaking thought-provoking and relevant.

Executive Director
May 2009
When The Print Center invited us to jury the 83rd Annual International Competition: Printmaking, surely they were expecting something different. We are the co-directors of an alternative space in Harlem that makes exhibitions about art without art—using reproductions and other surrogates—and haven’t curated a show of actual artwork for more than three years. On the other hand, we are also the co-publishers of Art on Paper magazine, and in that capacity we think a lot about printmaking and the graphic arts. These are areas that to us remain of vital interest, as much for their socio-political histories as for the many ways artists today continue to fold printing techniques into broader studio (or post-studio) practices.

So, when we first sat down to look at the more than 1,900 entries, our natural inclination was to conceive of a show that somehow combined these two concerns—our more shamelessly conventional interest in printmaking and our more unorthodox approach to curating. In other words, we wanted to find a way to make an exhibition of the prints that didn’t actually include the prints and that was more truthful to our experience jurying the show, a process that was realized entirely by looking at digital files and 35mm slides.

Before we committed to a curatorial idea, however, we needed to narrow down the submissions to a core, manageable group. We whittled as follows: we eliminated all the works that made use of symbols that we think have become expressive clichés: the boat as a metaphor for body or soul, the leaf as memento mori, the bird as a symbol of freedom or the spirit. Then we looked for similar works by different artists and selected those that—in side-by-side comparisons—we thought were the strongest (inevitably a highly subjective enterprise). To further narrow down the field, we started bundling works by sensibility or approach—grouping works that prominently employed text or decorative motifs, for instance, or works that made use of the language of comics or graphic novels, or conventional landscapes that showed great technical proficiency. Artworks that couldn’t be easily grouped with others we’ve kept together in their own category. As we narrowed each group down to a core few, we looked for works that showed evidence of self-awareness and self-criticality, rather than work that looked to be in sync with recent trends.

At this point, we had a generous working selection. We took all the digital files and rescaled them in Photoshop using their actual dimensions as a guide, printed them, and then cut them out and laid them on a large table, along with a to-scale printout of a person. (This was to help us understand how actual prints might look, relative to one another, in real space.) It was then that we began toying with different presentation strategies. One idea was to submit our little printouts instead of the actual artworks to John Caperton, The Print Center’s Curator, and ask him to either exhibit them under glass tabletops or on all the walls as miniatures. We also considered proposing a show to John that consisted exclusively of projections: in one gallery, a single PowerPoint projection of the digital images we had selected, in the other, a slide show of the 35mm slides we’d selected. But as we got further and further down the path, we got cold feet: the artists were expecting their actual work to be presented at The Print Center, was it fair to them to do otherwise? Moreover, was it right for us to potentially disenfranchise The Print Center’s core constituency, when the organization—which we respect and admire—had so generously invited us in the first place? We decided it wasn’t.

So, in the end, we selected the works and left it up to John to figure out how to install them. We’ve done our part. The tables are turned. It is time for you to judge us.
